

Milwaukee tools now at Pintorsa

Â By Julia Bartlett

When Pintorsa first opened seven years ago it was where we went for metal fittings, especially stainless ones, and marine paints and varnishes.Â There were fewer businesses servicing the marine market back then and it was a relief to know that I was going to walk out with nuts and bolts I needed without chasing all over the Rio, perhaps in vain. When I needed a certain shade of Transocean marine paint they ordered it in for me from the City, and two days later I had it.Â But apart from the wonderful selection of metal fittings and marine paints and varnishes that was about it. However, some good news, Pintorsa is now stocking Milwaukeeâ€™s sparkling new range of heavy duty power tools alongside Sherwin Williams paints in endless shades, Transocean and Sur marine paints and varnishes, Johnson cutlass bearings, their huge range of stainless and other metal fixings and all the products like epoxy, thinners, acetone, fillers and wood stains.Â The list goes on and if they havenâ€™t got it thereâ€™s a lot thatâ€™s just a phone call away and nothing is too much trouble for the charming manager Dariz Solis de Ramirez and her assistant Alejandro Morales. I also like being able to drive my launch literally up to the door to shop and load up, especially when things heat up around here.Â Pintorsa is located at the far right corner of the "concrete mall" across the street from BanRural.
